

right for workplace

It used to be all about the corner office. Office suites were designed to promote organizational hierarchy and power. The result was closed doors, long highways, and the 'cube farm'. While there will always be the need for private spaces in the workplace, corporations are beginning to see the financial and productivity benefits of promoting workplace flexibility, comfort, collaboration, and creativity. In response, individual workplaces and office buildings are promoting more dynamic, more open, more efficient, and more supportive people-based spaces than they used to. But renovating older spaces for new modes of working isn't always so easy (or cheap), leaving many companies to stick with traditional solutions even when they see the pressing need for change.

Staff needs are changing, customer needs are changing. It's time to change with them without breaking the bank.

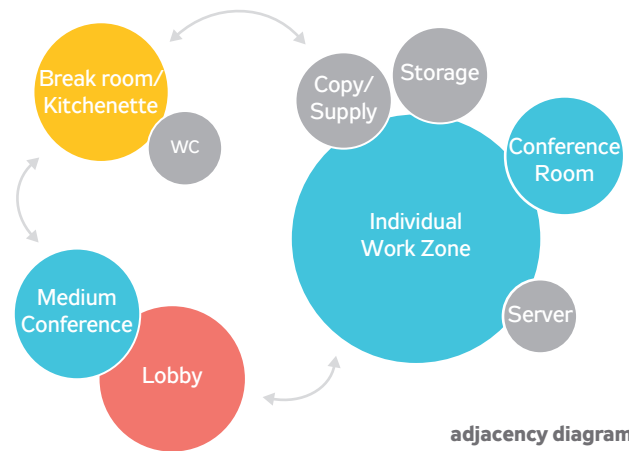

Maximize flexibility with a modest budget. We provide award-winning, sustainable designs at 25% lower cost than typical construction solutions – that's more money to put back into stuff like staff expansion, modular furniture solutions, branding, technology and other amenities. Over the building's lifecycle, Frogs have been modeled to optimize energy performance, typically consuming 40 - 50% less energy than traditional buildings. Frog buildings integrate off-the shelf components with smart HVAC and IT distribution systems so that infrastructure can be maintained, modified and relocated without disruption.

Pressure to move fast? No worries. Both one- and two-story Frog buildings collapse the development cycle by pre-engineering the parts of the building that make smart sense to do so. This means that only several months of on-site construction while mitigating schedule, budget and safety risk.

Be adaptable. In an increasingly competitive climate, the most nimble and relevant firms will attract the best talent and create distinction in the marketplace. Inspiring, people-centered environments lead to higher employee productivity, reduced turnover and increased overall satisfaction. You don't adapt to a Frog building, it adapts to you, facilitating flexible spaces that can be easily expanded or repurposed for changing uses or realities.

fit for working

Staff needs are changing, customer needs are changing. It's time to change with them without breaking the bank.

adjacency diagram
small office ex8.1.1

site plan
small office ex8.2.1

Worker productivity has been proven to go up by 25% when buildings provide clear views, balanced daylighting and better ventilation.

Working with you. It couldn't be easier! Whether you are an architect, a facility manager or a curious customer, our team can provide the right tools that will help you determine if we're a good match for your project. Contact us or fill out a simple online questionnaire and our planning team will work with you to tailor your space and site plans, specify product and performance goals, and refine pricing and schedule.